Information regarding Female Development players

There has been some misinformation circulating regarding female development players that I would like to clear up.

A female development player is a player who is playing for another hockey Canada minor hockey association that wants to play for our association as well. That would mean someone playing for LaSalle Minor hockey, Windsor Minor hockey, Riverside Minor hockey, etc.

There has been talk that these players are allowed to play female hockey for a nominal fee since they are already registered in another association. This is NOT true. They still would have to pay the registration fee set by SPFHA. The reduced fee that is mentioned on the OWHA site relates to the fees SPFHA pays to OWHA which is $45.00 per year per player. These fees are reduced because the player is already insured.

Therefore, any female also playing in a male league can still play for SPFHA but they must pay full registration fees.
